SAFALYA

From the Desk of Assistant Dean and Heads

As we stand at the threshold of a new year, I want to take a moment to reflect on the achievements and challenges we have faced together and to express my optimism for the opportunities that lie ahead. May the coming year be filled with success, joy, and fulfillment for each member of our academic family. I want to express my sincere gratitude to all faculty and staff members for your unwavering commitment to academic excellence, research, and the overall success of our school. Your dedication is the driving force behind our accomplishments, and I am confident that together, we will continue to achieve new heights. As we navigate the challenges and opportunities that lie ahead, I encourage collaboration and open communication among faculty members, students, and parents. Our strength lies in our ability to work together towards a common goal, fostering an environment where ideas flourish, and innovation thrives. Additionally, I am always open to hearing your feedback and suggestions. Your input is invaluable as we strive to enhance the School's overall experience and effectiveness. In closing, let us approach the coming academic year with enthusiasm, resilience, and a shared commitment to excellence. I look forward to witnessing our collective achievements and the positive impact we will undoubtedly make.

What Mahabharata can teach us about Management?

The important Management Lessons from Mahabharata for the MBA aspirants that will help them in understanding the nuances of this dynamic field. Learn these lessons for a bright management career.

Lesson 1: Strategy and Leadership

As per the Mahabharata, Krishna is a renowned strategist. In the battle Krishna ensures that he virtually leads the 7 divisions of Pandavas' army to a decisive win against the 11 divisions of Kauravas' army. It was Krishna who taught the skills of preparing the right strategy before venturing in the battlefield. He with his discourses kept on motivating Arjuna that he has to take on the role of the 'Leader' and fight against Kauravas.

In modern era, Stephen Covey also mentions in his book that "as a professional, you must pay heed to your 'inner voice'". While proposing the whole person paradigm, he focuses on the four dimensions of a person – spirit, body, heart and mind. The one who listens to the voice of his/her conscience often excels in strategizing and pioneering leadership skills.

Lesson 2: Passion is the Best Teacher

Another prominent story about the devotion of 'Eklavya' the royal guru 'Dronacharya' is a milestone to achieve for MBA aspirants. Eklavya was passionate about learning the art of archery, but his potential guru 'Dronacharya' refused to teach him the skills. Therefore, he hid behind trees and watched him teach the art of archery to Pandavas and Kauravas. It is his passion that he learnt all the techniques of archery just by observing from far away without a teacher actually teaching him. Not just that, he becomes so good at it that Drona feels, he is actually better than (or at par with) Arjuna.

Hence, if you want to excel in a career of your choice then ignore the impediments and work industriously to achieve your goals. In the field of management, your Passion to succeed counts both academically and practically as well. Your commitment to fulfil the deadlines, your agility to learn new skills and flexibility in adjusting to the ever changing dynamic conditions of the business are required to sail through the waves of challenges. Therefore, remain passion-driven to succeed or else you will perish.

Lesson 3: Use the Right Model at the Right Time

In the days of the Kurukshetra war Krishna let Ghatotkach die so that Karna would not be able to use his Shakti astra to kill Arjuna. Krishna let Abhimanyu die in violation of all laws decided for the war so that even the Pandavas could break the laws to kill Duryodhana, Karna and Drona. Ethically these moves were wrong, but they were necessary to win the terminal goal of the battle.

In the strategic management also organizations are aware about various models, but depending upon the nature of the economic downturn and boom, the model is chosen and implemented to churn out the market share.

Lesson 4: Commitment and Common Goal

In Kauravas side every one had personal bias. On the other side, Pandavas were committed wholeheartedly and were willing to achieve the common goal. The Pandavas never stopped fighting for what rightfully belonged to them. Their courage and determination is definitely something to admire and learn from.

Lesson 5: Participation of Women

Pandavas always gave respect to women and their decisions. Kunti, Draupadi, Subhadra are few influencing female characters in Mahabharata. On the other side, Kauravas were all patriarchal structure. Gandhari was not heard and there was no participation of women in decision-making.
